Rallying cries rang across Wake's campus this year. Students gave voice to their opinions on a variety of issues. Student opinion was found in student-led forums, the editorial columns of the Old Gold and Black, student protests, and in classroom discussions. Issues that generated the greatest amount of controversy were the computer mandate, the pricing and billing system used by ARA, race relations, and the Greek system.

Pro Humanitate may seem like meaningless Latin garble to some, but to many Wake students, the phrase signifying "For Humanity" has a deeper meaning. This year marked the culmination of two years of work for Project Pro Humanitate, an entirely student run organization which supervised all stages of constructing a house for a needy family. Plus, building the house directly on campus facilitated campus-wide awareness and participation. Hopefully this organization marks the beginning of a new era of involvement and awareness for Wake Forest students.

THE YEAR IN REVIEW

STRAIGHT TALK

talk about sex, baby..."

Yet again the rappers Salt n Pepa have captured the spirit of the times. For whatever reason, TALKING openly about sex and sexuality has been rather difficult here at dear ol' WFU, but this year, there has been at least two bright spots on an otherwise dismal, dark background. WAKE Radio broadcast a music/talk show dealing with gay, lesbian, and bisexual stuff issues entitled "Straight Talk" and hosted by William Crow (sometimes, Chris Cooper, too). PREPAR continued its traditions of Rape Awareness week and first year students' sex education. The Women's Issues Network (WIN) faithfully produced weekly programming on a wide range of topics related to women but open to all students. So, at least there are outlets in which people CAN talk. Whether or not they choose to use them...

Suddenly there came a rapping, tap tap tapping underneath Davis' floor. 'Twas a transformer, nothing more. Then came shooting fire, I could have sworn, like a mythic fount from the days of yore. That night as the homeless students in Benson huddled, the security guards wandered around befuddled. Though the power was gone, the students carried on, as did the repair crews whose work was yet to be done.

ANALDA HOUSE

Communication. This 70's kitsch concept hit the 90's in a big way. The mantra "No mail!" has evolved into "No REAL mail" as student and faculty boxes have become swollen with flyers, coupons, cataloges (the J Crew generation!) and credit card applications. On a more formal level, the drive to disseminate written information (let's not even talk about the Net) has led to several new publications this year - WAKE Radio's Wavelength; Kyosaku; The Philomathesian literary journal; Awakenings, a(nother) magazine about Greek life - to name a few. The question is whether they will follow the path of the Mouthbreathers of old? Will they stick around?

"Living with an eating disorder" is a paradoxical statement. Maintaining one's health in order to live necessarily comprises feeding oneself. Women and men suffering from eating disorders, however, expect themselves to thrive in every endeavor while denying themselves the fuel essential to life support. Wake Forest University is an institution composed of perfection seeking individuals; therefore, its population is one highly susceptible to eating disorders. Emerging in the severe forms of anorexia nervosa, bulimia, compulsive overeating, and compulsive exercise, these life-denying disorders are normalized in today's mainstream society. Misinformation about the nutritional needs of the individual is rampant in media portrayals of the "health." Our conception of the "ideal body" is tremendously skewed, a societal distortion exacerbated by the "waif" models and "super Soloflex men" that bombard us daily in magazines and television. Ironically, "health" is not what these images promote. Health is an individualized state of existence in which the body and mind communicate, each informing the other of its needs. The "health" industry depicts a dichotomizing of the body and mind as a necessity, a separation in which the mind must override the body's needs. Eating and exercising thereby acquire the status of moral behaviors--behaviors that are used to determine to determine an individual's worth. Women and men at Wake Forest strive for excellence. Thus, if our society's conception of excellence involves disordered eating and exercise, then many Wake students will enact this destructive behavior. The pressures of finding an identity within a college setting often lead to assimilative practices. Watching the "bagel with mustard, nonfat yogurt, baked potato with soy sauce" phenomenon that is applauded among many of Wake's students and institutions, an individual who is attempting to "fit in" is likely to begin these quite bizarre eating habits. A new organization that calls itself ESTEEM (Educational System to Eliminate Eating Misconceptions) is working diligently on a preventative campaign to address the prevalence of eating disorders on our campus. Until Wake Forest acts as a whole--administration and students--to distribute accurate information to its population, these self-destructive behaviors will continue to escalate. Dismissing the severity of eating disorders among the student population undermines WFU's attempts to prepare its students for a successful life; individuals cannot succeed as living beings by simply feeding their brains--they must also feed their bodies.

What's Up ?

Ok, so it is the world's most common phrase. The real question is: Do we really mean it when we reply, "uh, nothing"? If you actually take the time to listen you might get more interesting answers...answers which have nothing to do with ACADEMICS! (YES, It's True!)

Pop Quiz--- This picture is A) the sophomore class picture from 1974 B) the cast of Car Wash C) The program planning committee D) Typical Friday night party garb at Wake. D. Watch out Wake the 70's are back! It sure didn't take long. . . From Donna Summer, George Clinton and Superfly to the Brady Bunch and even John Travolta, Wake students are turning back the clock. Disco and 70's theme parties abound this year. We can only hope that we'll all be gone before Elvis returns!

AND THIS IS A) a 24 hour marathon analysis of Descartes to determine the significance of the comma B) the program planning committee C) one of Wake's many poetry readings. C. Students at Wake enjoy get togethers that border on the academic. The key to this strange occurrence is that the students TRULY enjoy these activities and that is why they continue to pop up.

THESE WAKE STUDENTS ARE A) attentively watching their daily dose of Sesame Street B) Recovering from Friday's parties C) anxiously watching the Demon Deacons take on Oklahoma State in the Sweet Sixteen. For 2 weeks news cameras on the quad were as common as flyers in the post office. Many a homework assignment was forgotten this Spring as students spent time celebrating Deacon victories.

Can anyone guess what this photo was intended to be? No multiple choice is necessary . . . IT'S DATING!!! In reality there are couples on campus, but the persistent story is that the Deacs Don't Date. Perhaps the University needs to look into this. Afterall, dating is part of the real world and students may complain if this important part of their education is overlooked. So, here's to Wake Forest and mandated dates to go along with our new computers!

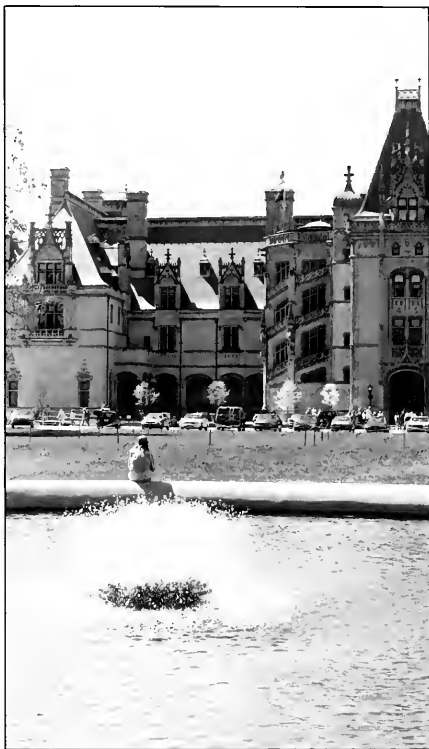

(LEFT) AND IN THIS CORNER WE HAVE A) the newest look for professional wrestlers B) a scene from Rambo Ballet: The Final Challenge C) the chairman of the program planning committee D) a well known side effect of Wake Forest Derby Days. D. Every fall the Greek organizations throw themselves into the traditional competing, singing songs, racing and doing goofy things (like wearing ballet outfits!?!).

Let's Go-Wake style

Like most other college students, "Wakies" living on college budgets enjoy finding things to do off and on campus. Some students flock the FREE scenery offered at nearby Pilot mountain, while others splurge a little to trek with the student Union to the Biltmore house (right). Other students stay closer to campus, finding entertainment in our own Coffee House or tailgating a mile away at Groves stadium. This year some students even enjoyed a catered meal (payable by meal card!) with our men's basketball team.

T H E R E I S M O R E . . .

Everyone always sees the actors on the stage, but it is a common misconception that acting and perhaps music define FINE ARTS. It is with this stereotype in mind that The Howler presents a look at a few other forms of FINE art.

First, Wake students can be found expressing their creativity backstage at the theatre. They work with the costumes, control the sound and lighting, apply the makeup (and hair!) and even build the stage. We know the actors appreciate all of this extra work. . . but we want to make sure that the rest of you do too.

Meanwhile, art at Wake appears to be advancing in great strides. From the graffiti walls and displays in Benson to the guest artists and exhibits in Scales. . . ART IS LIFE.

The recognizable registration lines that fill Reynolda's Green Room every semester are simply a part of academic life for Deacons.

Panic Attack

Registration is a Stressful Time

Registration. This simple word reminds many Wake Forest students of an intolerable and daunting experience. At the beginning of every semester, students face long lines, wait lists, and cancelled classes. "I think I must have been registered for every class offered by the time it was over," exclaimed sophomore Tiffany Mitzman. Alpha Phi Omega, service fraternity, handles registration as a service to the University, and President Jason Cheney believes that this year's process "went well, possibly the smoothest ever." To most students, however, registration is a stressful time. Efforts to make it more bearable included the addition of computer terminals, but many students wonder why Wake does not use a phone registration process similar like several other universities. To this question, Cheney responded, "Phone registration has been discussed, but more money would be required for installation." Thus, students must settle for the frustrating process that begins each new semester.

Take it From Me

Advisors Ease Academic Path

To a college student, course listings and requirements are often difficult to keep track of, if not overwhelming. In order to prevent delayed graduation or work overload, students are assigned academic advisors. Lower division advisors are members of the faculty charged with the duty to inform freshmen and sophomores of their academic expectations and to aid the students in planning a realistic course of study. At the end of the sophomore year, when students declare majors, they choose new advisors within the respective departments. The major advisors help with completing the upper level work. Student advisors also play an important role in first-year academic planning for freshmen. They serve as mediators for the faculty advisors and students. "My student advisor proved to be more helpful

"You want me to take what?!" Dr. Horace Kelly of Business and Accountancy outlines a schedule that seems unbelievable at first to this student.

than I thought she would," said sophomore Becky Meisenbach. The University offers advisors as a resource to students to ensure that courses run smoothly and to enable students to achieve academic success by answering questions about course requirements, credit hours, and approving class schedules. Thus, the faculty-student team is a valuable combination for students just entering the University.

Helping Hands

Students Turn to Centers to Get Added Boosts of Help

Sometimes students find the need for help outside the classroom and took advantage of the helpful services offered by the special centers on campus. The Counseling Center's mission is to help students who have emotional problems ranging in degrees of severity. It also is involved in the University community by sponsoring outreach programs on issues like communication and leadership skills. "I feel that students view the center as a resource with consultants and educators, rather than a mental health clinic," Johnne Armentrout, member of the staff, said. The Learning Assistance Program is an integral part of the Counseling Center. Not only does the program offer tutoring services, but staff members work with students to set goals and improve study methods. The Writing Center is another service that helps students with academic work. Founded on the belief that all writers benefit from sharing their work, peer tutors read papers and react as an audience might. "The center revolves around writing as a form of thinking," director Thomas McGohey said. Together, the centers prove that help exists beyond the classroom for students.

Working 9 to 5

Work Study benefits are more than Money

If you take a look around any sector of the campus, you might notice classmates working on things other than English papers and math problems. About 300 students participate in the federally funded work study program designed to allow students to pay off their education while enrolled at the college of their choice. The University's division of the work study is also beneficial to the participants' futures because it allows them to choose their department, therefore gaining experience in a relevant field of work. Freshman Beth Kaleida commented on her choice of the theatre department as "a good way to get more involved in the cultural aspects of Wake." An added perk in the theatre department is complimentary tickets to student productions, valuable to theatre fans when cash is low. A student in the program schedules work hours around the class time. Once a month, students are paid directly instead of into their University account. Responsibility then falls to the student to manage expenses. Work study is ideal for students who are in need of an extra financial boost for their education. Further, the opportunity to work in an interesting environment is an advantage students could carry with them into the real world.

Reminiscences about Wake Forest

Robert W. Brehme

When I arrived at Wake Forest in 1959, as a just-graduated Ph.D. from Chapel Hill, Wake was called Baptist Hollow known best for its ban on dancing on campus, though the top floor of Reynolda Hall held a large ballroom. (It was used, however, to advise and section students during registration.) I shared a crowded office with two colleagues in Salem Hall, which then housed the biology, chemistry, and physics departments. President Harold Tribble told the faculty to wear coats and ties to class and the students to stay off the grass on the upper quad. Dean Edwin Wilson spoke eloquently about the honor system and the love he had for Wake. Women lived only on the south side of campus, men only along the upper quad; students were forbidden to live off campus unless they were locals. Alcohol was forbidden among students and frowned on among faculty. Fraternity parties were chaperoned by faculty, who managed to look the other way. Wake was a great school then but it is greater now.

Lab Work

Computer Labs are E-mail and Term Paper Central

Computers are students' essential school supplies during the school year. Frantic paper writers and electronic mail users alike turn to the University's Computer Center for both work and pleasure. The University's main computer lab is in the Z. Smith Reynolds Library. The Information Technology Center, or ITC, is located on the second floor of the Wilson Wing. Faculty, students, and staff have access to its amenities. This center contains over twenty Macintoshes that include Internet services, WordPerfect, and other programs. Other locations of computer labs add to the availability of computers on campus. Labs exist in Carswell and Wingate Halls, the student apartments, between Johnson and Bostwick (known as Vegas) and in Luter and Poteat residences. Most of these labs are accessible 24 hours a day.

Even though computer labs seem integral to student academic life, changes have been made to the University system. On March 27, 1995, the faculty approved the Program Planning Committee's proposal for a mandatory computer purchase for incoming freshman. This proposal has generated a debate on whether students and faculty should be provided with University issued computers beginning fall semester 1996. Several other crucial votes would be taken to determine the success of the proposal. However, a university-wide computer purchase program would undoubtedly affect the future of computer labs.

Something For Everyone

Office of Career Services is a Job-Hunting Student's Best Bet

The Office of Career Services is undoubtedly a valuable resource to the Wake Forest Community. With two goals—to assist students as they plan for their professional future and to support recruiters in their search for valuable employees—Career Services aids the career choice process by bringing together students and employers. Although the Office deals primarily with seniors, Director William Currin strongly suggests early involvement beginning in the sophomore year. Career Services provides testing in order to assess skills and interests and individual counseling. It also assists in the internship process which allows students a taste of the market place in a field of interest in addition to posting part-time and full-time job openings.

Moreover, the Office provides the graduating class with access to the employment network. On-campus recruitment has brought over 200 organizations to the University to search for new employees. Part of Career Services provided the students with advice in interviewing techniques and resume workshops. For the future, the Office hopes to increase its technology without loss of individual student contact and establish for a larger, more diverse recruitment base. Dr. Currin also hopes that the entire student body would become more involved in Career Services, regardless of major or class.

"All Pleasant Memories"

The Howler Spotlights James Ralph Scales

Drinking coffee and opening mail in his fourth floor office of the Wait Chapel tower, President Emeritus James Ralph Scales told me of his plans the next day for a cruise to the Panama Canal. He was going with his friend and driver Willie Hughes; this was their third trip together. They always have a "very, very good" time together.

Scales has been on plenty of other trips for which Wake Forest served as his departure point. He maximized the student interaction that he treasures so much by taking student groups to the London and Venice houses about ten times during his service to the University from 1967 until last spring.

As president of the University from 1967 to 1983, Scales witnessed many changes on the campus. He considers the expansion of the arts a most important achievement during his term. Perhaps the manifestation of his desire for excellence in the arts most visible to present members of the community is the fine arts center that was dedicated in 1983 - his last year as president - bearing his name.

Scales, a native of Oklahoma, came to Wake Forest after receiving his B.A. from Oklahoma Baptist University and his M.A. and Ph.D. from the University of Oklahoma. He studied as well at the University of Chicago and the University of London. He never lost his willingness to learn; his interests include extensive reading, writing, and exploration into Native American culture.

After his term as president of the university, Scales returned to teaching English History. He taught until the spring 1994. Since then, he expressed regret that he has had little direct interaction with the present students.

*"He brought light into the rooms he entered."

One main reason that he had less student interaction is his confinement to a wheelchair after his last stroke. Yet, despite his health problems, he still comes to work most days, maneuvering into his office high above the rest of the campus.

It is this resilience that Dr. Edwin Wilson, friend and colleague of Scales, termed his "indomitable spirit." Wilson also said that Scales took a "great personal interest in other people" that would reveal itself in the hellos that he would greet students and faculty with as he passed them.

Although the typical present students has had few, if any, opportunities experience this side of Dr. Scales, there was definitely evidence in my interview of his "charm," as Wilson described him. He asked me where I was from and told me about his daughter, Ann, a professor at the university of New Mexico law school. There was much more to Scales than just a past University presidency.

Scales said that all his memories of Wake Forest are pleasant and that changes the University have gone through are "for the better." Arguably, though, it is Wake Forest that is the better for having such a remarkable man grace the President's Office, the community, and the classroom.

Kimberly Turner

Dr. Scales has been a member of the Wake Forest family since serving as president from 1967-1983. He continues to come to work daily.

Shooting for a Goal

Despite having fifteen first or second year players out of twenty-five, and despite the unexpected death of Head Coach Walt Chyzowych to a heart attack days before the season began, this year's Men's Soccer team had a successful season. Under the leadership of former assistant Jay Vidovich, the Deacons finished the season with a record of 10-7-1.

Revered Coach and Friend

On Friday, September 2, 1994 Head Coach Walt Chyzowych collapsed during a tennis match and died of a massive heart attack. Wake Forest lost much more than a soccer coach that day; it lost a friend and respected member of the Wake Forest community.

Since coming to Wake Forest in 1986, Coach Chyzowych revitalized the Soccer program and helped the Deacs climb towards the top of the ACC. In 1988, his team received their first NCAA bid, and in 1989, the Deacons took the ACC Tournament Title. Through his dedication and devotion to his team, Coach Chyzowych earned the respect and admiration of his players and assistant coaches. The team not only lost their coach, but also their friend, leader, and mentor.

Although Coach Chyzowych will be greatly missed on and off of the soccer field, his memory and lasting contributions to the sport and the community will continue to inspire those who know him.

W omen dribble into the ACC

Under the direction of Head Coach Chris Turner, the first edition of the Wake Forest Women's Soccer team finished its regular season with a record of eight wins and eight losses. With fourteen freshmen out of the twenty member squad, the women's soccer team is sure to see vast improvement. Cheryl Zimmerman led the team in scoring with 7 goals for the season.

Racing to Nationals

Francie Goodridge's Cross Country team, ranked eighth nationally, knew that this was the year to make something happen. The Lady Deacons faced a tough schedule, competitively racing most of the top 20 teams before seeing them again in Arkansas for the National meet. Nicole Stevenson led them to a 12th place finish. To get there, the ladies placed second behind UNC at the ACC championships and two weeks later ran away with a District Championship.

Keepling with Tradition

This season for Coach John Goodridge was thought to be more of a rebuilding year after losing his top 4 runners to graduation. However the Deacons, led by senior Craig Longhurst, continued their winning tradition by winning the ACC Championship and barely missing Nationals with a fourth place finish at Districts.

B uilding a New Tradition

In its third year as a scholarship sport, Jennifer Averill's Lady Deacons ended with a winning record of 12-8. With fifteen returning players, the squad worked well together from the beginning of the season as demonstrated by 4 non-conference wins in a row. Every game they played aggressively and worked up to their skill level. With only three seniors leaving, the Deacons hope to break into the Top 20 once again next season.

Tackling A Tough Season

The second edition of Head Coach Jim Caldwell's Demon Deacons pushed their record to three wins and nine losses. Thanks in part to the efforts of underclassmen, this year's football team posted wins against Army, Appalachian State, and in-conference foe Georgia Tech. With quarterback Rusty LaRue, receivers Roger Pettus and Adam Dolder, offensive linemen Eddie McKeel and Elton Ndoma-Ogar, defensive backs Richard Goodpasture and Tom Stuetzer, and linebackers Mike Neubeiser and Tucker Grace leading the pack, the Deacons showed many signs of improvement after a sluggish start. With the loss of only fourteen seniors, next year's Wake Forest football team has the potential to continue its rise towards the top of the ACC.

Men's Basketball

Overcoming all Odds

This year's Wake Forest Men's Basketball team is arguably the best ever. It captured the school's first ACC Regular Season and Tournament Championships since 1962. The team was the number one seed in the NCAA East Regional, advanced to the NCAA tournament for a record fifth consecutive year, and won over twenty games for a third consecutive season. Sophomore Tim Duncan was named the nation's Top Defensive Player, first team All-ACC, and third team All-American. Senior Randolph Childress was named second team All-American, first team All-ACC, ACC Tournament MVP, and finished third in the Naismith Award voting for National Player of the Year.

O utpacing the Competition

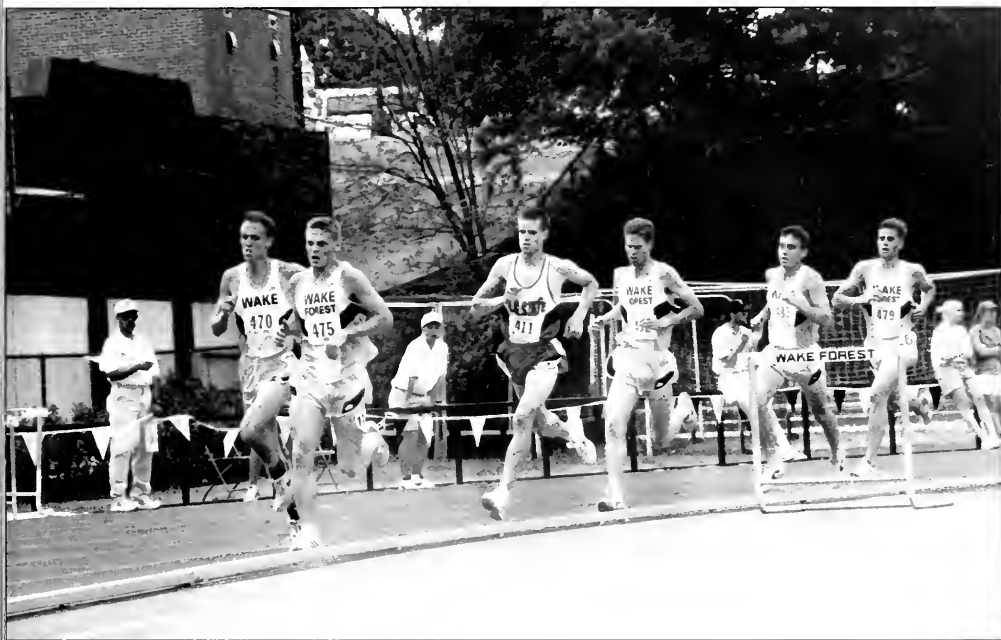

The 1995 Men's Track Team had a truly successful season. Not only did three players – Andy Bloom, Warren Sherman, and Kyle Armentrout – earn All-American honors; they also were NCAA qualifiers. Chosen second in the shot put event, Andy Bloom tied for the highest placing among the All-Americans for a male track athlete in WFU history. Plus, Bloom was named the ACC Championship Meet Most Outstanding Performer. Finally, Head Coach John Goodridge received the honor of ACC Outdoor Track Coach-of-the-Year.

O pportunities for All

Intramural Director Max Floyd has implemented many changes in the intramural system. Because of these changes, everyone has the opportunity to participate in IM sports. This year the teams ranged from water polo to bowling to soccer. Intramural sports provide every Wake Forest student, independent or Greek, athletic or not, a chance to compete.

ORGANIZAZTIONS

ORGANIZATIONS

As virtually every piece of literature published by the Office of Admissions is proud to tout, Wake Forest is home to over 100 organizations with purposes and activities more varied than the lunch selections in the Benson Center Food Court, or better yet those found in the Pit.

Seriously, these student-run – and mostly university funded – organizations are responsible for the numerous and increasingly diverse program offerings open to the entire university community, an effort that is commendable in and of itself. So please note the particularly active or visible groups that are highlighted on the following pages and realize that the 40+ groups included in this section are not and cannot fully demonstrate all of student activity on campus.

PRESBYTERIAN STUDENT FELLOWSHIP The Presbyterian Student Fellowship (PSF) is a group that meets weekly to discuss issues of faith, theology, and social concern. Each week, the meetings consist of a devotion, fellowship time, a program, and prayers. PSF members also express their beliefs through a commitment to service.

Beverly Huffstetler (General Coordinator), Karen Sell (General Coordinator), Craig Hunter, Ryan Weimer, Lou Cuthbertson, Caroline Gumpston, Brian Dimmick, Bruce Marsh, Rebecca Frost, Courtney Farley, Dana Douglas, Mary French, Ramsey Mallory, Mack Barr, Foy White, Catherine Jones, Katherine Jones.

WAKE RADIO. This student-run radio station provides "alternative" music, talk, and social programs open to and for the benefit of the entire campus community.

WOMEN'S LACROSSE CLUB --- WOMEN'S LACROSSE CLUB --- WOMEN'S LACROSSE CLUB --- WOMEN'S LACROSSE CLUB

WOMEN'S LACROSSE CLUB First played by Native Americans, this fast paced, exciting sport is quickly growing in popularity along the East Coast, and the Women's Lacrosse Club at Wake Forest exists to further the sport of lacrosse in this specific geographic region. This year, members played teams from Duke University, NC State, UNC-Greensboro, and UNC-Chapel Hill.

More than Words

This year marked another incredible season for the Wake Forest Debate Team. In December the team held the third position in the National Policy Debate rankings (NPDR). The NPDR is compiled from a formula that uses the top eight tournament placements by a squad as its criteria for ranking the teams. Only the two top-placing teams from a squad at any given tournament are considered for the formula. These teams consist of two students, and the entire squad must only send a few teams to compete at a competition.

Later in the season, the debate team sent three teams to the National Debate Tournament (NDT). Not only did our squad send three teams to the tournament, but the team of Adrienne Brovero and John Hughes reached the semifinals after winning a match against Dartmouth 4-3. The team lost to Harvard in the semi-finals of the tournament in a 4-3 decision. Despite this loss, Brovero and Hughes were awarded the Copeland award for the nation's top-ranked debate team after the regular season through a vote of 12-2 by the National Debate Tournament.

In order to stay atop all of these tournaments, the debaters must keep abreast of all current political issues. Even in the actual competition, an opponent could bring up a new argument on a subject, and the debaters must be able to beat the competitor at his own game. The team brings to competitions computers with a Lexis/Nexis information database, articles, and other information that they have compiled in their files, in case a new issue is brought up.

Under Construction

Volunteers for Project Pro Humanitate, a group closely related to Habitat for Humanity, raised the money, purchased the materials, and built a house for a deserving Winston-Salem family during this school year. Every student generation (four years) the organization builds such a house. During the other three years students do fund-raising work, making the project possible.

This year the project received money and supplies from local businesses, fund-raisers. The fund-raisers included a Christmas concert, mealcard donations, and other creative schemes such as Cow Bingo. For "Cow Bingo" students roped Davis field off, sold plots of land on the field for $5 a piece, and rewarded the owner of the plot where the cow defecated $200. The organization raised over $25,000 from all of these fund-raisers.

In order to get volunteers to help build the house, the committee had an open volunteer sign-up sheet in Benson Center, and also approached student organizations, mostly Greek groups, looking for volunteers. The object of approaching other organizations, was to get them to sign up for a day and provide volunteers during that time. This way students would be more prone to help with the project having friends to work with them.

The house was constructed off Wingate Road, across from the Chi Psi fraternity lounge. After completion, it was moved by truck to its permanent site on a lot on Hemlock Ave off of Akron Drive. The recipient of the house, Evelyn Miller, was thrilled with the donation.

Religion at Wake

Many different religious organizations are available to Wake students on campus. They consist of devotional groups as well as a variety of choirs. The following groups meet on campus: AGAPE, Baptist Student Union, Beth Jacob Congregation (conservative), Black Christian Fellowship, Chi Alpha Christian Fellowship, Chi Rho Male Choral Ensemble, Episcopal Student Fellowship, Fellowship of Christian Athletes, InterVarsity Christian Fellowship, Lutheran Campus Ministry, Muslim student organization, Presbyterian Student Group, Temple Emanuel (reform), University Gospel Choir, Wake Forest Catholic Community, and the Wesley Foundation.

Some of the activities that the different organizations sponsor include a Pre-School Conference, a Crop Walk, a week at the Samaritan Inn, and the Christmas Lovefeast. At the beginning of the year, many of the religious organizations sponsor the Pre-School Conference, which is a four-day informal orientation for incoming freshmen. The orientation includes faculty/student panels, small group discussions, mini-courses, recreation and worship. It is a great way to be introduced to campus life and meet other freshmen. Another activity available to students is the Crop Walk, which is a national effort seeking to reduce hunger. The participants are sponsored for a 10K walk with the proceeds being divided between local and national agencies. A third activity sponsored by the religious groups gives students the opportunity to volunteer at the Samaritan Inn. Volunteers serve the evening meal and spend the night at the homeless shelter.

A major activity that takes place on the Wake Forest Campus is the Christmas Lovefeast, which is a Moravian tradition with beeswax candles, coffee, buns and music. Students, faculty and the community come to enjoy this yearly event in Wait Chapel, learning about the religious background of many of the founders of Winston-Salem.

Every Thursday students, faculty, campus ministers and visiting speakers gather for Thursday Worship. This is held during the 11:00 a.m. time slot, when no classes are scheduled, providing every student a time and place to worship during the week.

Besides the Christian fellowship, a Muslim student organization was organized this year. Al-Husein Madhany, Qais Sedki, and Joseph Golden, the leaders of the group, plan to educate the campus community with speakers and educational pamphlets for the campus community. They also hope to provide emotional and spiritual support and acceptance for Muslim students.

Leading the Way

Have you ever wondered what Wake Forest students can do to encourage top-notch perspective students to come to Wake? Well, take a look at what the Harbinger Corps does for our university. The Corps consists of about 70 student tour guides, and about 40 active members of the "contact team." All students who wish to be part of the Corps must apply for a position and then be screened so that the Corps can choose people who will leave the best possible impression with prospective students and their families.

The tour guides must go through a training period where they learn the basic tour route as well as the history of different buildings and programs at Wake Forest. These students must be prepared to answer many of the questions that the prospective ask on the tour. The students who choose to be guides generally are assigned a specific time for which they are responsible for giving a tour each week at that time.

But the Harbinger Corps does not just wait for students to come to Wake Forest to start recruiting them. Once the admissions office sends out acceptance letters, the contact team gets in touch every accepted student. Early-admissions applicants receive a personal letter, while other accepted students receive telephone calls. This personal "contact" hopefully adds to the friendly touch which helps a student decide to come to Wake.

Issues Being Voiced

The Black Student Alliance (BSA) promotes unity and support among the African-American students at Wake Forest University. The organization voices their concerns to faculty, administration and the campus community.

This year 76.9 percent of the voters during a Spring election, approved of a measure that changes the constitutional provision to ensure that a black student will always serve in the Student Government Legislature. Thus if an African-American is not nominated for Student Legislature through normal voting procedures, the BSA must nominate three candidates to fill the seat. The Student Government's Committee on Committees will select one of these three nominees.

The Black Student Alliance provides a voice for minority concerns. As seen with the recent passed proposal in the Student Legislature, BSA plans to make sure they can voice their concerns in the influential groups on campus.

The Army Reserve Officer's Training Corps (ROTC) is one of the four ways through which one can obtain a commission in the United States' arms forces. The other three are graduation from any one of the four U.S.

military academies, successful completion of officer Candidate School, and by direct commission. With the exception of attending a military academy, the Army ROTC offers the best preparation for matriculation and eventual assumption of a position in the military. The program is taken in addition to a regular academic major, and its main objective is to train an individual to become an officer in the army upon graduation from college.

Subsequently, one has the option of serving full time in the military or part time in the Reserve or the National Guard. ROTC stresses the development of leadership skills. The lower level classes, generally taken by freshmen and sophomores, are open to all Wake Forest students. These courses include topics such as military history, leadership, and orienteering. The higher level classes are restricted to those who express a genuine interest by signing a contract stating their intention to serve in the army. Another option for ROTC members is to become part of the Ranger Challenge Team. This team consists of ten members and competes with other schools in team and individual events, such as building a bridge. The group promotes physical conditioning, military training excellence and esprit-de-corps.

The practical training and academic knowledge of ROTC prepares the students to fill entry level positions for commissioned officers in the Army.

Meeting Expectations

Modeled after the United States federal system, the Wake Forest Student Government consists of executive, legislative, and judicial branches. This strong framework creates a system where the executive branch provides vision, planning and initiative; the legislative branch cultivates debate and generates ideas; and the judicial branch hears violations of the honor and judicial systems. Executive Officers for this year are as follows: Steve Bumgarner, President; Andrew Martin, Speaker of the House; Tarnetta Jones, Secretary; and Allison Stewart, Treasurer. The Honor Council Chair and Vice Chair are Monica Stucky and Peet Dickinson, respectively. The Co-Chairs of the Judicial Board are Graham Goodrich, Emily Graham, and Laura Wilson. Marc Sneed is the Student Counselor Coordinator.

Wake Forest University Student Government is not a club, organization, or association; it is indeed a government. This student government acts as a liaison between the Wake Forest faculty and staff. Throughout the history of Student Government this joint relationship has brought to fruition many student ideas and proposals. From the first visitation and dancing policies to alcohol and social host liability issues, from initiating a cable system on campus to creating a universal campus debit card, the Wake Forest University Student Government has been on the front lines — fighting for students' concerns, initiating ideas and collaboratively seeking the implementation of proposals.

The 1994-1995 school year has been an exciting and busy year for Student Government. Accessibility and visibility to students remains a primary focus for the year. Effective publicity and communication has resulted with more interaction with fellow students through SG UPDATES, email, and personal discussions. The Student Government has been active in discussing many important issues on campus including but not limited to the intellectual climate, campus security systems, and a university wide campus calendar. The Program Planning process has drawn to an end and Student Government will continue to stress to the University the issues students feel are crucial in the implementation of long range goals. Joint programming with Student Government and other student organizations proved successful following the early arrival of students for the Wake Forest vs. Duke on January 11. Work will continue on the Shorty's proposal for a campus pub by stressing Shorty's as an integral element in creating a campus social environment for all students outside the confines of the Greek system. As renovations are occurring all over campus during the next several summers, Student Government is playing an active role in seeing that students' needs are met in the renovations of the Quad Residence Halls, Tribble Hall and the Pit. Finally, Student Government in conjunction with the Volunteer Service Corps sponsored Project Pro Humanitate II, a student initiated and funded project to build a home for a Winston-Salem family.

The 1994-1995 school year continued to follow Student Government's tradition of strong leadership, vision, and initiative. Student Government's main purpose is to serve students. If at any time you, the student, have any concerns, ideas, comments or criticism, never hesitate to voice them. Wake Forest is a great university, and Student Government exists to make it even better for you.

Building an Arch

The Alliance for Racial and Cultural Harmony, A.R.C.H., is a group devoted to working towards heightened racial and cultural awareness, understanding, appreciation and sensitivity. The goal is to get students who do not usually socialize with one another to discuss issues or to work together on community outreach projects.

ARCH is only in its second year and the group has already developed a reputation on campus as a noteworthy organization. In the next coming years ARCH hopes to reach a broader range of students, faculty and administrators, particularly those who do not share ARCH's mission of racial harmony. The leaders of ARCH hope that it can become a large enough group as to make race issues a priority on our campus. Even after 33 years of integration, the campus continues to experience social segregation and subtle discrimination, according to several students.

ARCH also hopes to expand its involvement to focus on larger racial and cultural issues than just black and white issues. ARCH will continue to plan social events for this purpose. An arch between racial and cultural groups on campus becomes increasingly stronger as the group grows, and the members discuss issues which have created gaps between cultures.

ANALDA HOUSE

Benson Center Fifth Floor, affectionately known as Publications Row. At 2 a.m. on almost any

Wednesday night during the academic year, it is buzzing with activity. OG&B editors, layout staffers, and a few straggling reporters are in a frenzied daze, finishing off the week's edition before sending it to press. The last WAKE Radio d.j. of the day is still spinning discs for an audience that hopefully numbers more than one. And during the spring "peak season" when The Philomathesian and The Student (or whatever its name is for the semester) literary magazines are in publication phase and The Howler is bombarded with deadlines, the number of faces and the pace increase. ☉

Yet, all that simply comes with the territory. In total, a couple hundred folks work for five organizations responsible for disseminating information in varying forms to the entire campus: WAKE

Radio, The Old Gold and Black, The Student, The Howler, plus newcomers The Philomathesian and

WAKE Television. Funded in part by the university, these groups coordinate efforts under the aegis of the Publications Board and together regularly strive to contribute to and enrich an expectant university-at-large community, in the process subjecting themselves to a level of public criticism and accountability not faced by many – if any – other student organizations. ☉ And still they rise...

to the occasion, performing a volume of labors that only others who have worked in communications can understand, for reasons that probably no one other than the individual really comprehends.

Six Years Strong

The coming of Dave Odom to Wake Forest six years ago sparked some changes throughout the campus community. One of the most noticeable is the emergence of an "organized student cheering section" of sorts, the Screamin' Demons. Under the leadership of students Rett Padgett and Jeff Wolford as the respective president and vice-president, the Demons can boast membership of about 650 students, making it the largest single organization on campus this year.

What does it mean to be a Screamin' Demon? It means attending (or finding someone to attend for you) every men's basketball home game that doesn't occur during class breaks in addition to attending three women's basketball home games. It means having a seat somewhere in Lawrence Joel Memorial Coliseum for the big games at home - UVa and Maryland come to mind - but to get a good seat, camping out anyway; the diehards have been known to camp out for a couple of days. And it means going that extra mile to support the teams; a few members have been known to eat BBQ potato chips just before opponents shot free throws in order to create "bad karma."

Whatever the section members did this year, though, worked. Positive team and crowd chemistries were definitely apparent this year, and the hope is that this momentum will carry over to next year and ultimately into other sports. Go Demons.

Rock (ehm, Dance) On!

If activity is a measure of success, the Wake Forest Dance Company is a runaway hit! Even though the director, Rebecca Myers, is on an extended leave of absence, the company continued to dazzle audiences with concerts each semester; a Christmas-time performance of variations from Tchaikovsky's Nutcracker Suite at a local elementary school, and a spring Fine Arts Day performance in the Benson University Center rotunda (far right photograph) – in addition to the usual array of classes taught by adjunct professors Brantley Shapiro, Diane Markham, Beth Petty, and Fanchon Cordell.

What was the secret of their success? Hard work. With Beth Petty in a provisional role as "company overseer," sophomore Kimberly Klose handled most office work and senior Karen Nunley taught the Social Dance and Beginning Dance Techniques classes. As for the concerts themselves, while the choreography for the fall concert came from sources as varied as Diane Markham, Rebecca Myers, and even George Balanchine, the spring concert – with the remarkable exception of a Jewish liturgical dance piece set by Avodah – contained only student-choreographed pieces, an example being the ballet piece performed by Marissa Sechrest photographed to the right.

So, the Howler staff congratulates the Dance Company for a job well done and continued success in the future. May this year's momentum carry over into next year!

SING A NEW SONG...

... unto the Lord. Or so the song goes. Or so the men's Christian acapella group Chi Rho does. A quick glance at some of these photos to the right of this story reveals that these guys do have sense of humor and, apparently, a great time.

Yet, their primary function is to perform, as the name implies. Christ-centered works for all who wish to hear them: the Board of Trustees, various churches throughout the area, Project Pro Humanitate supporters, and Student Union Coffeehouse attendees, to name a few. This "great time," then, stems from singing in a community of like-minded individuals who all share the intention of praising God through song. Hallelujah!

Each year the school selects a handful of students to be Resident Advisors (RAs) for the year. The RA system places the responsibility of enforcing the school's rules on student peers. These students must go through training as well as take a course that meets throughout the year. The purpose of these courses is to teach the RAs how to manage people.

These students represent the qualities of responsibility, leadership, and maturity. The job requires the RAs to put on a variety of "programs" that allow for social or educational outlets for their residents, to check students in and out of their dorms, and to help enforce the campus rules.

BOOK SPECIFICATIONS: The ninety-third volume of the Wake Forest University Howler was printed by the Delmar Publishing Company in Charlotte, NC, through representative Elizabeth Wearn. The editor-in-chief is responsible for the final content of the book, and opinions expressed are not necessarily those of the trustees, administration, faculty, staff, or students of Wake Forest University. Three-hundred-thirty six pages in length, the 1995 Howler has a trim size of 9X 12 inches and a press run of 2500 copies. The cover material is Brillanta fabric that has been both embossed and gold stamped. Type styles used in book vary through sections. The folio fonts are 12 point Adobe Trajan Bold Woodtype Ornament Two. The book itself was printed on 100 lb. glossy paper and includes 8 four-color eight page forms (flats) and 4 spot color flats. All pages were designed on Macintosh LC III and Power Macintosh 6100/computers using the Macromedia Freehand 5.0 and Aldus PageMaker 5.0 applications. All pages were submitted to the plant using 3.5 in. HD floppy disks.

PHOTOGRAPHY: Individual student portraits were taken and printed by Thornton Studios, Inc. of New York, NY. A Wake Forest University photography staff independent of the Howler was responsible for all other photographs unless otherwise specified. For black and white photographs, the Photography Staff used Kodak TMax 100, 400, and 3200 film and Ilford Multigrade III RC Rapid Paper. Color slides were taken using Kodak and Fuji films and processed locally at Talton Professional Photofinishing and Photo Lab.

ADVERTISEMENTS: Advertisements were sold exclusively by Yearbook Press of America, based in Marietta, GA.

EDITOR'S NOTE

GITTE BORN

Every yearbook editor-in-chief must have a friend - not an acquaintance, but a friend. Preferably, this friend is not on staff. ☺ Back to the matter at hand. Not only does this friend provide the ever crucial frustration vent, this he/she (or even it, from some of the past editors I have known) friend allows the editor to put the whole schebang into perspective. Friends can offer suggestions as to why administrators seem to be more interested in the book - as a recruitment tool and coffee table decoration, primarily - than the students for which it is intended. Friends can remind us that sometimes, we just have bad luck and that there's no conspiracy against us. For weeks I thought that the entire photography staff was carrying on a vendetta against me. That or else they were on strike and never bothered to announce it. ☺ But I digress. A really good friend is one who knows when to tell us to back off, to cool out. Even better, a really good friend knows when to congratulate us and to tell us that someone really does care. ☺ No one can do this alone, and I think that during my topsy-turvy social life that every student - cognizant or otherwise, experiences at some point during their time at Wake Forest. I managed to make a few not just good but great friends. To them, I have nothing but love and thanks. Okay. To them and the Student Life staff, who helped me beaucoup. ☺ Still, every Howler editor for the past twenty or so years has had access to one of the best friends that this experience has given me, Lavonne Bell. I must admit that she was no surprise to me. I remember taking a phone message from her my freshman year, 1991. She was calling the Howler office to complain to the then editor-in-chief, Marian House, about not receiving her book. It was ugly. But like clockwork, when September 1994 rolled around, I, too, became the direct recipient of her apparent wrath. Over the course of the year, I came to learn that she was not wrathful at all, simply anxious. Receiving her Howler, she tells me, is the highlight of her year. ☺ I really got to know Lavonne during these past couple of weeks as I have been finishing the book. In this office alone for literally hours on end, I started to look FORWARD to her calls of encouragement. She even composed poem about the Howler that she recited over the phone. I would love to recreate it - it was beautiful, but when I asked her to repeat it so I could write it down, I realized that this was an impromptu offering. Here's the gist: her father worked for the university - hence her introduction to the Howler. He has since passed away, but in her mind, he lives in his yearbooks, and because of this association, she has grown to love the Howler and really appreciate the efforts of the students that work to produce the book. She said she loved us all, and I really do believe her; she truly is a special person. ☺ However, that still doesn't answer the question sawing through my mind now. Why did I edit this book? I really don't know. Lack of foresight? The inability to say no? My latent communal instinct for fair representation kicked in? I don't even want to guess. But this little ditty, this is the senior colloquium that I didn't have time to write, and in a way, this book represents a part of me recreating the Wake Forest I know. Good luck to next year's editor-in-chief, Lori Shores, and be nice to Lavonne.

the 1990s, the number of people with a mental health problem has increased by 50% (Mental Health Foundation 1999).

There is a growing awareness of the need to address the needs of people with mental health problems, and the importance of the role of the community in this. The World Health Organization (WHO) has developed a number of initiatives to address the needs of people with mental health problems, including the 'Mental Health Action Plan' (WHO 1993) and the 'Mental Health Strategy' (WHO 1998).
